Singapore stocks end lower amid mixed regional trading; STI down 0.5%

SINGAPORE stocks ended lower on Monday (Dec 8), amid mixed trading in the region.

The benchmark Straits Times Index (STI) lost 0.5 per cent or 24.28 points to finish at 4,507.08.

Meanwhile, the iEdge Singapore Next 50 Index gained 0.3 per cent or 3.91 points to 1,444.66.

Across the broader market, gainers trailed losers 222 to 290, after 1.1 billion securities worth S$1.1 billion changed hands.

Key regional indices were mixed. Hong Kong's Hang Seng Index lost 1.2 per cent and the FTSE Bursa Malaysia KLCI dipped 0.2 per cent, while Japan's Nikkei 225 index gained 0.2 per cent and South Korea's Kospi rose 1.3 per cent.

"The good news for them is that a 25 basis point Fed cut on Wednesday is essentially locked in... but what happens next is the part no one agrees on," said

Ipek Ozkardeskaya, senior analyst at Swissquote.

The base case is that politics will dominate and that rates will continue to move lower, she said.

"But here is the risk: if the Fed delivers politically driven cuts without economic justification, markets could push back and long-term yields could rise," she added.

On the STI, Venture was the top gainer, rising 1.1 per cent or S$0.17 to end at S$15.07.

The worst performer was DFI Retail Group, falling 2.2 per cent or US$0.09 to close at US$4.01.

The local banks ended lower. DBS lost 0.4 per cent to finish at S$53.97, OCBC fell 1 per cent to finish at S$18.73, and UOB was down 0.2 per cent to finish at S$34.44.

US dollar ebbs as investors gear up for tricky Fed decision

THE greenback eased on Monday (Dec 8), ahead of a week packed with central bank meetings and headlined by the US Federal Reserve, where an interest rate cut is all but priced in, although the committee is sharply divided.

Besides the Fed decision on Wednesday, the central banks of Australia, Brazil, Canada and Switzerland will also hold rate-setting meetings, although none of these are expected to change monetary policy.

Analysts expect the Fed to make a “hawkish cut”, where the language of the statement, median forecasts and chair Jerome Powell’s press conference point to a higher bar for further rate reduction.

That could support the US dollar if it pushes investors to dial back expectations for two or three rate cuts next year, though messaging could be complicated by policy-makers’ divisions; several have already all but indicated their voting intentions.

“We expect to see some dis-sents, potentially from both hawkish and dovish members,” said BNY head of markets macro strategy Bob Savage in a note to clients.

The Federal Open Market Committee has not had three or more dissents at a meeting since 2019, and it has happened just nine times since 1990.

Even though the US currency has drifted lower for the past three weeks, dollar bulls have recovered some of their nerve.

Weekly positioning data showed speculators held their largest long position – one that assumes the value of the dollar will rise – since before President Donald Trump’s “Liberation Day” tariff bombshell, which sent the currency tumbling.

The labour market is softening, but overall growth is holding up, the stimulus from Trump’s One Big Beautiful Bill should start to filter through, and inflation is still well above the central bank’s target rate

The Reserve Bank of Australia meets on Tuesday after a run of hot data on inflation, economic growth and household spending. Futures imply the next move will be up and possibly as soon as May, leaving the focus on the post-meeting statement and media conference.

The Bank of Canada is also widely expected to leave its interest rate on hold on Wednesday and a hike is fully priced by December 2026. The Canadian dollar was steady at C$1.3803, having hit 10-week highs on Friday following strong jobs data.

The yen, which stabilised last week, having weakened sharply in November, dipped, leaving the dollar up 0.19 per cent at 155.61 yen.

Sterling held around US$1.3325 and the Swiss franc was a touch weaker at 0.805 francs. REUTERS
