Markets are flirting with the idea of a peace dividend, said Stephen Innes, managing partner at SPI Asset Management.

Equities are lifting as the possibility of a 45-day ceasefire circulates and oil prices ease, he added.

"... The underlying tone remains cautious, reflecting a market that understands the odds of a near-term deal remain low."

Stephen Innes, managing partner, SPI Asset Management

Greenback steady as traders weigh escalating tensions, ceasefire hopes

THE US dollar was steady on Monday (Apr 6), while the yen flirted with the crucial 160 per dollar level, as nervous investors took stock of the escalating Iran war, with all eyes on the latest deadline from US President Donald Trump to reopen the Strait of Hormuz.

In an expletive-laden Easter Sunday social media post, Trump threatened to target Iran's power plants and bridges on Tuesday if the strategic waterway is not reopened, setting a precise deadline of 8 pm Tuesday Eastern Time (0000 GMT).

"Trump's latest deadline itself is bearish not because investors think war is guaranteed tomorrow if Iran does not open the strait, but because every new ultimatum makes the disruption look longer, stickier and more macro-negative," said Charu Chanana, chief investment strategist at Saxo in Singapore.

The euro was at US$1.1523, while sterling last fetched US$1.3211. The dollar index, which measures the greenback against six rivals, was slightly lower at 100.12.

The Australian dollar was 0.3 per cent higher at US$0.69045, wobbling near the two-month low that it hit last week.

In the kind of mixed messaging that has baffled supporters, foes and financial markets alike, Trump told Fox News on Sunday that Iran was negotiating, with a deal possible by Monday.

Axios reported the US, Iran and regional mediators are discussing terms of a potential 45-day ceasefire that could lead to a permanent end to the war.

Global markets have been rattled since the US-Israel war on Iran broke out at the end of February, with Teheran effectively closing the Strait of Hormuz, a key waterway that is a thoroughfare through which about a fifth of the world's total oil and liquefied natural gas passes.

"If the strait is reopened fully around (Trump's Tuesday deadline), oil will fall sharply and risk will rally hard," said Prashant Nwaha, senior rates strategist at TD Securities.

"However, if the US escalates, expect global markets to reprice sharply. It's wait-and-watch in what's turning out to be a binary event."

Traders are now no longer pricing a move from the Federal Reserve well into the second half of 2027, compared with expectations of two rate cuts in 2026 at the start of the year.

The yen was flat at 159.55 per dollar, not far from the 21-month low that it hit last week as traders watch for indications of Tokyo intervening in the wake of strong warnings from officials in the past few days.

Japanese Finance Minister Satoshi Katayama on Friday put currency traders on notice, saying the government stands ready to act against speculative moves in foreign exchange markets as volatility has risen "significantly".

Still, many doubt the firepower of any intervention at a time when geopolitical turmoil in the Middle East is fuelling relentless demand for the safe-haven dollar. The yen has dipped 1.5 per cent since the war started, stuck near the 160 level.

Speculators have also been adding to their short yen positioning, with the latest weekly data showing a short position worth US$5.7 billion, the highest since July 2024, when Japan last intervened in the FX markets. REUTERS
