

Top 10 highlights of Singapore: Inside Out

ART

Street artist Farizwan Fajari aka Speak Cryptic recreates his bedroom by drawing out its features on white walls and cubes. He then invites visitors to draw and paint details for the room – which they did with abandon.

Dessert chef Janice Wong mounts an edible art installation with chocolates, lollipops and gummies in local flavours such as chilli padi and gula melaka. Visitors can eat as much of the installation as they want.

Zul Mahmud's mesmerising "sonic tree" recreates the sounds of the city, forcing one to stop and listen carefully to the daily sounds and rhythms one takes for granted

Jason Lim's meditative durational performance draws large crowds as he examines time and memory using candles and incense

FOOD

Food celeb KF Seetoh heads a pop-up store just opposite the iconic Flatiron Building selling laksa yong tau foo, popiah, ngho hiang balls, kaya toast and Milo dinosaur. The laksa and ngho hiang balls are bestsellers, says Seetoh. PHOTO: HELMI YUSOF

The Meatball Shop, a popular hipster hangout co-founded by Daniel Holzman (left), is adding to its menu Hainanese Chicken meatballs. These succulent balls pack chicken chunks with seasoned jasmine rice to go with the Singapore Sling.

Iconic fast food joint Shake Shack created the Singapore Onde Onde Shake, a flavourful drink topped with grated coconut. It's inspired by Singapore's green dumplings filled with melted gula melaka.

PHOTO: STB

Award-winning chef Lee Boon Seng of Resorts World Sentosa's Osia is serving up an entire menu of Singapore dishes at the chi-chi Bergdorf Goodman restaurant, including lobster laksa (above) using fresh Maine lobsters.

PHOTO: HELMI YUSOF

FASHION

At the high-end Bergdorf Goodman store, John Clang's photographs form the backdrop of fashion by Kenzo, Alexander Wang, Celine and other top designers. PHOTO: STB

Two 16-page fashion spreads in the latest issue of Bergdorf Goodman feature locations in Singapore. PHOTO: HELMI YUSOF