Greenback falls for second day as yen recovers

THE US dollar dropped for a second day on Wednesday (Apr 1). This came as expectations of a ceasefire in the Middle East conflict grew after the US signalled that an end to the war could be near, even though markets remained on edge amid fears of escalation.

The dollar index, which measures the currency against a basket of currencies including the yen and the euro, was last down 0.3 per cent at 99.456, slipping to a one-week low after a 0.65 per cent fall on Tuesday.

"Markets are increasingly buying into the notion of de-escalation in the Middle East overall," said Kirstine Kundby-Nielsen, FX analyst at Danske Bank.

"Markets are optimistic. We're seeing some relief with rates going lower, equities going higher and the price action in euro-dollar reflects that quite well."

The euro edged up 0.5 per cent to US$1.1603 to hit its highest level in a week, after rising 0.8 per cent on Tuesday.

The yen recovered from this year's low of 160.46 per dollar, moving back through the psychologically important 160 level that had fanned concerns about intervention by Japanese authorities. It was up 0.1 per cent, at 158.46 against the greenback.

Sterling strengthened 0.7 per cent to US$1.3313.

At the same time, there were still signs of escalation in the conflict. US Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth said the next few days in the war against Iran would be decisive and warned Teheran that the conflict would intensify if it did not make a deal.

Meanwhile, attacks took place on multiple fronts on Wednesday, with drones hitting fuel tanks at Kuwait's international airport. Qatar said an oil tanker was struck by an Iranian cruise missile in Qatari waters.

The greenback has benefited from a safe-haven bid since the conflict began in late February, and the US, a net energy exporter, is also relatively better positioned to handle oil disruptions than other nations.

Brent crude futures fell below US$100 a barrel on Wednesday, although they were last trading at about US$102.70.

This week's main US economic focus will be Friday's jobs report for March. It is expected to show that employers added 60,000 jobs during the month, according to the median estimate of economists polled by Reuters, following an unexpected loss of 92,000 jobs in February.

A sharp deterioration in the labour market would likely revive expectations for rate cuts from the Federal Reserve this year, which have been largely priced out as rising oil prices from the Iran war stoked inflation concerns.

Markets were pricing in about 11 basis points of easing from the Fed this year, implying just under a 50 per cent chance of a quarter-point rate cut in 2026.

The yen was little changed after the Bank of Japan's quarterly Tankan survey showed business sentiment among large Japanese manufacturers improved in the three months to March, though firms expect conditions to worsen in the next three months. REUTERS
