Greenback hits fresh high against yen

THE US dollar touched a 9.5-month high against the yen and edged up versus the euro on Tuesday (Nov 18), as investors worried about Japan's fiscal stance and awaited American data for signals on the Federal Reserve's next move.

European shares fell alongside US stock index futures amid concerns over stretched equity valuations. Yet, the greenback's reaction in the foreign exchange market has so far remained muted.

The US dollar index, a measure of the American currency against major rivals, was last up 0.05 per cent at 99.59, after snapping a four-day losing streak on Monday.

The safe-haven Swiss franc was roughly unchanged against the US dollar and the euro.

The yen was last at 155.42, up 0.1 per cent. Earlier in the session, it hit 155.445, its lowest level since Feb 4.

While Bank of Japan governor Kazuo Ueda has signalled the chance of raising interest rates as soon as next month, Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi has voiced displeasure over the idea and urged the central bank to cooperate with government efforts to reflate the economy.

Barclays advised staying long on the US dollar against the yen, saying Takaichi's Abenomics-style policies are likely to keep pressure on the Japanese currency.

It lifted its target to 158.80, arguing that additional fiscal spending will swell Japan's debt and raise the premium investors demand to hold yen.

Analysts also flagged a growing risk of forex intervention, which could slow the greenback's climb, though they noted that recent verbal warnings from authorities do not point to imminent action.

Japan must compile a stimulus of around 23 trillion yen ($193 billion), Goushi Kataoka, a private-sector member of a key government panel, said on Monday.

That would far exceed the 17 trillion yen package previously reported by the Nikkei newspaper, stoking fresh market anxiety over the supply of new government debt that bond markets would have to digest.

The yield curve for Japanese government bonds steepened further on concerns about the size of Takaichi's stimulus package, with 20-year yields reaching a 26-year high.

"That is so far enough to cast more doubts about the ability of the Bank of Japan to hike rates in December," said Francesco Pesole, forex strategist at ING.

Investors are also awaiting the release of US economic data after the longest government shutdown on record, with the September jobs report expected on Thursday.

"This data is backward-looking but remains very relevant," noted Paul Mackel, global head of forex research at HSBC. "It captures the period when the (Federal Open Market Committee) resumed its easing cycle and follows the time when chair (Jerome) Powell sounded dovish at Jackson Hole about US labour market conditions."

Money markets have in recent days priced the chance of a 25-basis-point rate cut next month at around 50 per cent, the CME Group FedWatch tool indicated.

The euro was down 0.05 per cent at US$1.159. Concerns over France's fiscal trajectory, which had weighed on the currency, eased after Prime Minister Sebastian Lecornu survived two no-confidence votes in parliament last month. REUTERS
