US$0.05 to end the session at US$1.33. Across the broader market, gainers beat losers 380 to 244, after 2.2 billion securities worth S$2.3 billion changed hands.

Key regional indices were positive. Hong Kong's Hang Seng Index gained 1.2 per cent, South Korea's Kospi rose 6.5 per cent and the FTSE Bursa Malaysia KLCI was up 0.5 per cent.

"Right now, the market is behaving like a trader who has survived the margin call and suddenly feels invincible again. But beneath the optimism, the oil fuse is still burning," warned Stephen Innes, managing partner at SPI Asset Management.

He added: "Oil remains the critical macro trigger because continued inventory draw-downs could rapidly transform optimism into a non-linear supply panic."

CURRENCIES

Greenback drops; yen surge ignites intervention chatter

THE US dollar fell against most major currencies on Wednesday (May 6) as investors grew optimistic about a possible end to the Iran war, while a sudden jump in the Japanese yen to a more than two-month high put traders on alert for another round of official buying from Tokyo.

A source from mediator Pakistan, who is familiar with the negotiations, said Washington and Tehran were closing in on an agreement on a one-page memorandum to end the conflict.

The Pakistani source said a report earlier by US outlet Axios on the proposed memorandum was accurate. The Axios report had cited two US officials and two other sources familiar with the discussions.

The yen rose by as much as 1.8

per cent earlier in a swift move that left the dollar at a session low of 155, around its weakest since Feb 24. The dollar had earlier broadly strengthened against a range of currencies before a sudden move lower against the yen, which triggered speculation of another round of intervention.

Japanese Finance Minister Satsuki Katayama earlier in the week warned against speculative moves in foreign exchange, after a brief jolt higher in the yen sparked speculation Tokyo had again intervened to support the currency.

"As I have said repeatedly, we will take decisive measures against speculative moves, in accordance with the statement signed between Japan and the United States last year," Katayama told reporters after the Asian Development Bank's annual meeting in Uzbekistan.

The Ministry of Finance of Japan could not be reached immediately for comment during a local holiday.

Part of the problem for Japanese authorities in staving off persistent weakness in the yen lies in markets that are beyond their immediate control, such as higher US Treasury yields, which favour the dollar, and oil, CIBC Capital Markets head of Japanese Finance Minister Satsuki Katayama earlier in the week warned against speculative moves in foreign exchange.

G10 FX strategy Jeremy Stretch said.

"It's very tough to get the yen down if oil is going to remain elevated and/or US Treasury yields are, in terms of 10-years, you're nearer 4.4 per cent than you are 4.2 per cent. So that was always going to be the difficulty the Japanese were going to have. The fact that we've been able to get it back to 156.5, given the fact that we've still got 10-year yield at 4.42 per cent and oil is still closer to US$100 than US$75, I guess, is some degree of success," he said.

Overnight, US President Donald

Trump said he would briefly pause an operation to help escort ships through the Strait of Hormuz, citing progress towards a comprehensive agreement with Iran, shortly after US Secretary of State Marco Rubio said on Tuesday that the United States had achieved its objectives in its military campaign against Iran.

Oil prices dropped 10 per cent on Wednesday, bringing Brent crude below US$100 a barrel.

The euro rallied sharply, rising 0.8 per cent to US$1.1785, as did sterling, which traded at US$1.364.

The Australian dollar traded around its highest in four years, rising 1.1 per cent on the day to US$0.726, in the wake of the Reserve Bank of Australia's decision the previous day to raise rates for the third time this year. REUTERS
