Greenback holds firm; euro, yen, pound slip

THE US dollar held firm on Monday (May 11) after US President Donald Trump rejected Iran's response to an American peace proposal, a move that sent oil prices higher and prompted renewed concerns that the conflict in the Middle East will drag on.

The US dollar index, which measures the greenback's strength against a basket of six other major currencies, was little changed at 97.977. Oil prices jumped, with Brent crude up 2.5 per cent at US$103.80 a barrel.

Ultimately, markets still believed there would be a resolution to the conflict – and the market reaction on Monday was much tamer than during past flare-ups in rhetoric, noted Kenneth Broux, head of corporate research for foreign exchange and rates at Societe Generale.

"I think the reason for that may be the involvement of China," he said, adding that the "the summit with China and the US later this week is, for me, the main event".

He was referring to the influence the two countries have in the Middle East.

Trump and his Chinese counterpart, Xi Jinping, are set to discuss Iran, Taiwan, artificial intelligence, nuclear weapons and critical minerals when they meet, according to US officials.

Inflation and growth worries linked to higher oil prices, as well as any potential reaction from central banks, also continue to play on the market's mind, Broux said.

US inflation data for April is due this week after the American jobs report released last Friday showed that non-farm payrolls increased by 115,000 last month, almost twice as fast as expected.

Those figures reinforced expectations that the US Federal Reserve would keep interest rates unchanged for some time.

The Fed held rates steady last month as expected, but the decision exposed its deepest split in decades, with three officials dissenting against signalling future rate cuts.

Factors that could weigh on the

In the UK, markets were watching for any fallout from last week's local elections, in which the Labour Party saw heavy losses.

US dollar "have become more elusive after hawkish Fed dissents, resilient US data and a continued stalemate in the Middle East", said Alex Loo, senior macro strategist at TD Securities in Singapore.

Elsewhere, China's renminbi reached its strongest level against the US currency in more than three years at one point on Monday.

The offshore currency was steady, last trading at 6.7928 yuan per US dollar.

Data released earlier in the day showed that China's producer prices smashed expectations to hit a 45-month high in April on rising global energy costs.

That followed figures published over the weekend indicating that China's export growth accelerated last month, as factories raced to meet AI-related demand.

Meanwhile, the euro was down 0.1 per cent at US$1.1772, and the yen slipped 0.3 per cent to 157.11 per US dollar. The pound was also lower, by 0.2 per cent at US$1.361.

In the United Kingdom, markets were closely watching for any fallout from last week's local elections, in which British Prime Minister Keir Starmer's Labour Party saw heavy losses.

Chris Turner, global head of markets at ING, said in a note: "While Labour losses were not quite as bad as feared, they have failed to quell speculation over a Labour leadership contest and a clear leftward drift in government policy." REUTERS
