“A victory by Italy in the final would be a triumph for ‘teamwork’. I am very excited to see that coming through this weekend. The Azzurri’s togetherness has been lauded throughout the tournament, grinding out matches with their tenacity and commitment in giving their all to win. This Italian team has very quickly become the favourite. Football may have gone ‘home’ with the game being played in London, but the trophy is destined for Rome. Let me make a final forecast - 1-0 to the team in blue. Forza Italia!”

“For the first time in 55 years, England is in a major final... and we could be lifting the trophy at their home ground in Wembley Stadium! Italy is a formidable opponent and unbeaten in 33 matches. However, I am confident that the Three Lions have the momentum to win the final in style. Go, England! Football’s coming home!”
