Across the broader market, gainers beat losers 416 to 221, after 3.4 billion securities worth S$2.1 billion changed hands.

Key regional indices were positive. Hong Kong's Hang Seng Index gained 1.2 per cent, South Korea's Kospi was up 5.1 per cent and the FTSE Bursa Malaysia KLCI advanced 1 per cent.

SPI Asset Management managing partner Stephen Innes noted that "the market is trying to lean into a subtle but important shift around the Strait of Hormuz" as the US begins guiding ships not involved in the Iran conflict through the corridor.

"In doing so, it could reframe the situation from confrontation to controlled stabilisation. Rather than escalating the conflict, the objective is to restart global trade," he said.

Yen rises sharply before unwinding

THE yen saw another sharp, intraday jump against the US dollar on Monday (May 4), prompting speculation about another bout of intervention by Japanese authorities to bolster the battered currency.

The yen climbed as much as 0.75 per cent to 155.69 before unwinding, with much of the appreciation coming during a nine-minute stretch around 0400 GMT.

The Japanese currency was last up 0.1 per cent at 156.84, after rising about 1.5 per cent last week, its largest weekly jump since February. It was also slightly stronger against the euro and pound.

Amanda Sundstrom, FX strategist at Nordic financial-services group SEB, said: "We suspect it to be intervention. My view would be that officials are intending to put a line in the sand at 160 (per US dollar)." Japan's finance ministry officials did not immediately respond to queries after the move on Monday.

Tokyo officials declined to confirm whether they had intervened last week, but sources told Reuters that the authorities did undertake yen-buying activity for the first time in two years. Money market data on Friday showed that Tokyo might have spent as much as 5.48 trillion yen ($45 billion) buying the yen last week.

Mahjabeen Zaman, head of FX research at ANZ Bank in Sydney, noted: "The primary focus will be whether further intervention occurs, noting that Japan is closed for the Golden Week holiday and there will be thinner liquidity during this time."

"And more importantly, whether the US will join Japan's efforts in supporting the yen. If the yen weakens further, you could argue that the likelihood of bilateral intervention increases."

Markets remained cautious at the start of the trading week, after US President Donald Trump said an effort would be started on Monday morning to free ships stranded in the Strait of Hormuz.

It would be a "humanitarian gesture" to aid neutral countries in the US-Israel war with Iran, he added.

Iran warned the US Navy not to enter the Strait of Hormuz, saying it would "respond harshly" to any threat.

The US dollar index, which measures the greenback's strength against a basket of six currencies, was up 0.1 per cent at 98.264.

The euro was little changed at US$1.1717 after German Chancellor Friedrich Merz sought to downplay a rift with Trump, following an announcement of plans by the US to draw down troops from Germany.

The country's economy ministtry said on Sunday that Berlin is also in touch with the European Commission as it holds talks with Washington, after Trump said on Friday he would increase tariffs on cars and trucks from the EU to 25 per cent.

Sundstrom said: "In the grand scheme of things, (car tariffs are) definitely not a positive, but it's not going to be the main driver."

The situation in the Middle East is definitely the dominant factor now."

The British pound was down 0.1 per cent at US$1.3564. British markets are closed on Monday for a public holiday.

The Australian dollar was down 0.2 per cent at US$0.7192, while its kiwi counterpart advanced 0.1 per cent at US$0.59. The Reserve Bank of Australia is due to announce its next policy decision on Tuesday, with the majority of analysts polled by Reuters expecting a hike in the cash rate to 4.35 per cent. REUTERS
